Worksheet #13: Career Planning List

Directions: Check the things that you have completed in your career-planning process.

HAVE YOU:

[Blank]  Taken an interest inventory?
[Blank]  Taken an aptitude or abilities test?
[Blank]  Used a computerized information system?
[Blank]  Used or checked on books about careers from your school?
[Blank]  Interviewed someone in an occupation of interest to you?
[Blank]  Attended a Job Fair or Career Day in your school or community?
[Blank]  Talked to college admissions representatives?
[Blank]  Talked to military recruiters?
[Blank]  Looked at college catalogs?
[Blank]  Reviewed career and college plans with your parents?
[Blank]  Completed a career shadowing program?
[Blank]  Discussed your career or college plans with a school counselor or advisor?
[Blank]  Prepared a resume?
[Blank]  Visited schools you are interested in attending?

Look at your list. What things do you still need to accomplish?

Make plans to do these when appropriate. Use Junior & Senior Timelines (Facilitator Guide pgs. 234-235) to help you stay on task and organized.

Worksheet #19: Career Informational Interview

Directions: Select someone working in an interesting occupation to interview. Spend at least 20 minutes talking with the individual and gathering information about his or her career and the occupation. Suggested questions are listed below. You can add questions related to your interests and concerns.

1. How long have you worked in this occupation?
2. What other occupations did you work previously?
3. Do you primarily work with people, data, things or ideas?
4. What do you like most about your job?
5. How did you get started in this line of work?
6. What personal qualities do you feel are needed to succeed in this line of work?
7. What type of training is needed for this occupation today?
8. What changes in your occupation have you seen occur?
9. What are the most frequently recurring problems on your job?
10. What type of technology do you use? (computer hardware, software, etc.)
11.
12.
13.
14.

Activity #20: Skills Scavenger Hunt

Do you know that workers use the same skills on their jobs as you do in school?

Directions: Select someone you know to interview. Ask them the following questions concerning skills they use on their job:

1. What's your job title?
2. What kinds of things do you read?
3. What kind of writing do you do?
4. Do you communicate by speaking and listening?
5. What kinds of mathematics are used on your job?
6. Does your company have customers or work with people in different counties, cities, states or countries? Examples?
7. How are major decisions made in your department? Examples:
8. Are you a problem solver at work? Could you give an example please?
9. What technology do you use to accomplish your job?
10. What machines do you operate on your job?
11. Do you teach others as part of your job?
12. Are you trained in other jobs at the same worksite?
13. Where did you learn the skills needed for your job?

Follow Up Activity

Combine the results of all the students' interviews into a master list for display. Make one list for each question and title each sheet with the skill. List the examples the various people told the students.

*Note for teachers: The objective is for students to explore skills (rather than occupations) on a field trip or shadowing experience.

6. Many occupations in Minnesota have a large number of openings available right now. See page 10 in MnCareers and list 8 occupations with many openings.

7. Why should you be interested in occupations with high vacancies when considering a career?
Worksheet #23: Who's the Career Counselor?

Participants, prepare for the ultimate role-play exercise in career exploration …

Students as Career Counselors

Congratulations!
As of right now, you're a high school career counselor. Students come to you with their hopes and dreams. Your job is to help them turn those dreams into reality. Sometimes that means recommending schools for post-secondary education or training in a specific area. Other times, it means showing individuals how to apply for financial aid. Some of your students don't have a clue what they want to do after high school, and it's your job to help figure it out. The principal (your boss) believes that all students have to have some idea of what they will do following graduation. "Our kids are good kids, and they all need goals," he said at a recent staff meeting. "Help them get some," he said, while looking right at you.

Your Task:
Counseling sessions with your students begin tomorrow at 9 a.m. sharp. Your boss promised parents that as a counselor, you're responsible for the development of 4 career and education options for each student. To do your job well, you'll need to:

- Get acquainted with career-planning resources on the Internet
- Meet each of your advisees and evaluate some basic information about him or her
- Fill out a form for each advisee in which you develop 4 possible career paths and appropriate education options for him or her

*Note: As a counselor at a large high school, you have many students to advise, so you'll have to learn quickly.

Potential Resources:
The Internet has numerous college and career-planning resources. It would be a good idea for you to familiarize yourself with some of the ones listed in 2007 MnCareers. Other resources include the activities in the 2007 MnCareers Facilitators Guide; MCIS Web site; ISEEK.org; Minnesota Office of Higher Education; and CareerOneStop.org, just to name a few.

When using Internet sites, be sure to remember the URLs and note which information you obtained from which sites so that you can refer to them when taking with your advisees.

The Process:
Counseling season has begun! The students are waiting outside the counseling office in 4 lines. The head counselor will tell you which students are yours. After meeting with individual students, answer these questions:

1. Does the student know what he or she wants to do after graduation?
2. If the student has a goal, is it realistic given the student's academic history?
3. If the goal is realistic, what should the student do next?
4. If the goal isn't realistic, what alternative career paths can you suggest that might be appropriate? (Example: The student wants to be a doctor but does not have good grades in science courses. What other options are available? Are other science or medical fields appealing? What about other careers where the student can help people?)
5. If the student doesn't know what he or she wants to do, how can you help with life direction?
6. What steps should the student take at this point in his or her career to help insure a successful future?

Written Recommendations:
Your final task is to write up a recommendation report for each of your advisees. Be sure to explain why you've chosen the options you have (for example, is it because of their academic record, personality traits, abilities, etc.?). At the end of your report, name 3 Web sources you found to be the most valuable in reaching your professional conclusions and why. Then be prepared to present your report orally to your peers what you advised and why. It's also a good idea to jot down notes as to anything you would do differently the next time around (spend more or less time one-on-one with students, give students different assessments, research additional materials in a particular subject, etc).

Remember: Faculty occasionally meet around the water cooler or lunch table to generate or exchange ideas and information. (It's OK to exchange resource ideas with other career counselors, but not gossip about your advisee's low skill level or blue hair.)

Job Performance = Evaluation:
Just like any other activity or project, you'll be evaluated on how well you did (similar to a job performance review). Most likely your instructor will base your performance on the thoroughness and creativity of the career options or school choices you suggested for your advisee. Your responses as to why you made the recommendations you did are equally important.

What You Will Have Learned:
Aside from developing career options for your "students," you will now be more aware of:
- The need to develop some goals and plans for your life.
- An understanding of academic achievement and career options available.
- The latest career planning information resources available online.

1. Based on the information in the table above, which are the best job prospects? Which are the worst?

2. What are some reasons why you would consider these jobs? What are some reasons why you wouldn't consider them?

3. Does an occupation with a strong outlook mean it has good job prospects? Why or why not?
Worksheet #26: Job Trivia

Directions: Divide participants into 4-5 groups of trivia buffs. Each group will be assigned 1 of the six career fields. Have participants use MnCareers (or other resources provided) to prepare 12 questions related to the career fields. Have participants keep their answers on a separate sheet of paper.

Have each group exchange their trivia questions with another group. Which group found the answers to the trivia questions first? Time each group.

Worksheet #28: Do I Have the Skills?

You've looked at a lot of different occupations in MnCareers. You've probably even started to pick out different careers that sound interesting. Do you have the skills that are needed for these occupations? Do you know all the skills needed for the occupation?

MnCareers has skill information for occupational groups. (For example, skills information for Computer Careers is found on page 38 under "What Skills Do You Need?"") Use the skill information in the publication to complete the activity below, using the following steps:

1. Think of 3 different occupational groups you find interesting (like Mechanics & Machinists, or Law & Social Services). Record each occupational group, one in each of the tables on this page and page 93.

2. Summarize the necessary skills for each in the "Skill" column.

3. Indicate whether or not you have this skill by circling YES or NO in the "Have skill?" column.

4. If you have the skill already, explain how you acquired it. If you don't have it, explain how you could develop or gain this skill.

Worksheet #29: Who Doesn’t Use Algebra?

When people ask which high school course is never used again, most people respond that algebra is not needed in the real world. But lots of jobs and daily tasks require algebra. The left column lists occupations and the right column lists how workers in those occupations would use algebra. Match the occupation to the correct application of algebra.

— Grocery Shopper a. Determines workers per hour per job
— Personal Trainer b. Calculates percent markups and sale decreases
— Clothing Designer c. Calculates percent probability of precipitation
— Meteorologist d. Increases and decreases recipe amounts — Landscape Architect e. Calculates duct size for maximum air transfer — Heating Contractor f. Determines unit prices
— Construction Contractor g. Calculates miles per gallon of fuel
— Guidance Secretary h. Calculates dosage in relation to patient’s body weight
— Mechanic i. Determines square area for plantings and mulching
— Chef j. Calculates calories needed in relation to body weight
— Store Proprietor k. Determines percent customer discounts
— Train Dispatcher l. Uses ratios to enlarge or reduce pattern sizes
— Truck Driver m. Calculates semester grade point averages
— Teacher n. Calculates ground speed versus air speed
— Anesthesiologist o. Determines horsepower-aerodynamics relationships
— Pilot p. Uses weighted grading system
— Salesclerk q. Determines tolerances for cylinder bores
— Automobile Designer r. Determines departure times based on speed-distance relationships

Worksheet #30: Characteristics of Successful People

Successful people have several characteristics in common. According to the SCANS skills,* employers expect job applicants to have the following skills:

Basic Skills: Reading, writing, speaking, listening, math

Thinking Skills: Creativity, decision-making, problem-solving, learning and reasoning

Interpersonal Skills: Team work, ability to teach others, leading skills, customer service skills, negotiating, working with culturally diverse people

Personal Qualities: Responsibility, self-management, integrity, honesty, sociability

Directions: Complete the following questions by circling the best answer.

1. I'm working to develop a variety of skills that might help me in the workplace.

   Name the skill(s) you're working on: _________________________________________

2. I think creatively and like to learn from new experiences.

   Give an example of a new experience: _______________________________________

3. I show energy and enthusiasm when working with others

   List an example: _________________________________________________________

4. I don't give up easily and am responsible for my actions.

   List an example: _________________________________________________________

5. I've told others what I do well.

   Things I do well: ___________________ _________________ _________________

6. I establish goals and figure out ways to achieve them.

   List an example: _________________________________________________________

Now, consider the characteristics of successful people. Do most successful people enjoy learning something new? Develop new skills? Do they meet their goals? Show energy in completing tasks? Do successful people keep trying? Do they seek information from experienced people? Do you?
